

From our first meeting with Robert in 2004 to discuss electrical modifications in our old home to our most recent meeting with Jay in 2015 to discuss audio visual features in our new home, we have had only the most positive experiences with Seaport Electric. They provide professional, courteous and efficient service combined with a friendly and caring demeanor. They are also well trained in the latest advances showing drive to provide the most up-to-date products and technologies, yet they deliver with a most impressive and traditional talent of being excellent listeners. Every time we met to plan and discuss decisions (whether very early or late in the day to accommodate our schedules), they would patiently and carefully listen to our preferences and decisions, and then take the time to implement. We wholeheartedly attest that working with Seaport Electric is hiring the best.

We rebuilt our home after Hurricane Sandy. From our electrical contractor, we required excellent work, fairly priced, with integrity and given our unique circumstance, a high degree of efficiency. Seaport delivered on all these points, above our expectations. Robert, Jay, Chris and the team performed 100% of the electrical work, including LED technologies and an integrated audio visual system which seemed like a splurge when we developed the construction budget, but ended up being an essential part of how we use and enjoy our home.

The construction was hands-on from our standpoint; as owners we rented a home near the site and were there every day, interacting with the Seaport team most days. A lot of the work was iterative - we'd have our architectural and electrical plans, but in a meeting with our builder Ted McFarlin and the Seaport team, we'd decide where to make changes based on how we expected to live in the house, as it was being built around us. The Seaport team was flexible and creative in helping us achieve our objectives. Their decades of experience allowed them to provide real-time input that helped us make great decisions.

Seaport's team is mature, focused and always "on it" - even months after the job is done. For example, we frequently seek advice from Jay on the use of our audio visual system, any time of day, regarding adding to it, fine-tuning it, or just for additional instructions. The Seaport team is always a quick text or phone call away. We have recommended Seaport to neighbors who have worked with them, and we've gotten very positive feedback.

We highly recommend Seaport for a new home or renovation.

Sincerely,

Stephen Petricone
